

School Fair Cancelled

Health Wednesday afternoon and acting on advice from Edmonton it was decided to cancel definitely the Strathmore District School Fair for 1935. Col. McGregor and Mr. Hutton will come from Calgary to judge the School Work and this will be on view in the Memorial Hall, Friday afternoon to parents only. There will be no other exhibits held.

An effort will be made to prevent the same thing from happening again either the theatre or churches.

My Cousin Bessie Harvey, wife of Walter Horne Harvey, resident of Alberta, writes me from her home at her house, 325 8th Avenue Court on Thursday evening last, following an absence of 12 years.

Born in Calcutta, India, the late Mr. Harvey received her education in England. She came to Canada in 1867, residing at first in St. John's, and then coming to Calgary. In 1897 she moved to Calgary. She was an active member of the Episcopal Church.

It was decided to sell the tobacco and boxbales at site of old livery barn for removal, to Mr Percy Wright.

A motion was carried to ask the R. C. M. P. to check speed of vehicles travelling through town along highway as most of these are travelling too fast thus creating a decided hazard.

Various hospital accounts and reform matters were discussed.

It was decided that the children to be brought under provisions of Workmen's Compensation Board.

A case of infantile paralysis having occurred at Carleton Place the matter of the same being referred to be submitted to the Dept of Health for the guidance of the local board of health.

(1) perpetual revolution of configured stars,
(2) perpetual recurrence of determined seasons,
(3) world of spring and autumn, birth and dying?
The endless cycle of idea and action, endless invention, endless experiment.
Brings knowledge of motion, but not of stillness.
Knowledge of speech, but not of silence;
Knowledge of words, and ignorance of the Word.
All our knowledge brings us nearer to our ignorance,
All our ignorance brings us nearer to death,
But nearness to death—no nearer to God.
Where is the Life we have lost in living?
Where is the wisdom we have lost in knowledge?
Where is the knowledge we have lost in information?

(From "The Rock" by T. S. Eliot)
IT SEEMS TO ME
All arts are one—all branches on one tree—all fingers, as it were, up on one hand.

Our hot defense of our ideas and beliefs does not indicate an established confidence in them but often half-distrust, which we try to hide from ourselves, just as one who suffers from bashfulness offsets his sense of inferiority and awkwardness by a rude aggression. If, for example, religious beliefs had been really firmly established there would have been no need of "side to faith", and so with our business system today, our politics and international relations. We dread to see things as they would appear if we thought of them honestly, for it is the nature of critical thought to metamorphose our familiar and approved world into something strange and unfamiliar. It is undoubtedly a nervous sense of the precariousness of the existing social system which accounts for the present strenuous opposition to a fair and square consideration of its merits and defects.

—James Harvey Robinson

In every human group there is less reason to guide and to check impulse, less capacity for self-transcendence, less ability to comprehend the needs of others and therefore more unrestrained egotism than the individuals, who compose the group, reveal in their personal relationships.

—Reinhold Niebuhr

INCIDENT IN BOOK BY

NELLIE MCCLUNG

Early Days in Grey County Recalled in Biography.

"We lived a mile from Chateaufort, on the Glenshira road in a stone part of the County of Grey. The stone lay over our farm the flocks of sheep, but one can grow accustomed to stones. To me they were always part of the landscape."

So Nellie McClung, writes of early childhood in Ontario, before she tells of adventures in the new "Clearing in the West," written in her latest book.

The other maternal relatives of her household, living in the more remote township of Holland, as final proofs of their magnificence. (They came from Edinburgh originally) had an organ in each home. They did not call it that. It was the instrument, and could not be played on Sunday. It stood in the corner, a complicated built of carved wood and red velvet, beaded tight and ornamented with two high and fluted gray vases of dead grass. The red velvet, showing so untidily through the wood carved in relief to me to peek out—my finger through and see for myself if it could be pushed back, but some good angel stayed my hand."

The Mooney kids who came to Canada, John and Don and William (uncles and father of "Nellie Lett") were born in Nenagh, Ireland. When John's wife, Janet Skindred died, (and before he married Lettina McCurdy of Dundee) a call went out to an old servant who was used to the ways of the Mooney boys in the land, so Judy Connor came, and lived with them all her days.

Milk for the Fairies

"Judy at certain times and seasons that had to do with the moon, took the precautionary measure of leaving a pail of milk outside grass for the fairies to wash in. It seems it was always done in Ireland to keep the little people in good humor. But one night my mother, who did not believe in fairies, gave to milk to the pigs, and the next day she shipped on a stone in the milk house and turned her ankle, and Judy told her it was well for her, it wasn't worse, so the pig was left there. When Judy lay dying, she had everyone listening for the shambles, who should, by all the laws of compensation and tradition have cried below the window, but no sound troubled the stillness of the maple trees around the house, until Watch, the dog, sensing that something was happening, lifted his head to the stars, and howled drearily. Judy heard him through the shadows that were closing around her, and opening her eyes, she looked at no mother in triumph. Now, thank God, I can die, she said, and she did!"

MEDICAL VICTORY

Medical Science has achieved a genuine victory, in the successful treatment of a doctor for treating his bette ulcer, recently devised at Hanna, Alberta, modelled after that of Dr. L. G. Hermann of Cincinnati. Under the supervision of Dr. Stanley Argue, the Hartman Bros., in their Hanna Machine Shop designed and constructed the instrument by which the treatment was given. The patient so successfully treated is our esteemed friend Mr. H. G. Metcra of the Hanna Herald.

We congratulate Dr. Argue and the Hartman Bros on their achievement, and for Mr. Metcra's recovery we sincerely rejoice.

NO SHEEP SHOULD BE CAUGHT BY THE WOOL

It is remarkable how few sheep raisers understand how to properly catch and handle their stock, says Mr. J. H. Spencer in "Sheep Husbandry in Canada," issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. The old shepherd's crook, so humane and useful in the years that are past, is no longer seen so much these days on any Canadian sheep farms. In many British flocks the crook still has its place, and with this and an intelligent grip the sheep are driven, caught, and handled with comfort and facility for both man and beast. To the sheep man it is equally true, to witness the rough, even brutal usage accorded the gentle, timid sheep on many mutton-raising farms.

To many sheep raisers and farm hands the wool appears to be a natural handle. If the torture inflicted by catching a sheep by the wool could be appreciated, doubtless many would seek a better method. The examination of a carcass of a newly killed sheep that has been lifted by its soul reveals an inflamed and congested area resembling the effects of a severe burn or bruise at every point over which the wool was pulled.

The proper method of catching a sheep is by the hind leg or the head. If in a close pen in which the sheep are closely crowded, it is an easy matter to secure the selected animal by the head, holding it fast until the others have moved away, clearing an avenue by which it may be taken. In a larger pen or yard, a sheep should be caught by the hind leg just above the hock or gambrel joint. A properly made shepherd's crook is of great assistance in this.

CARSELAND

The last meeting of the Carseland Ladies Aid was held at the home of Mrs. Fred How where the main item of business was planning for the annual chicken supper and entertainment. This is to be held Monday, Oct. 21st. Committees were appointed to take charge of arrangements.

Threshing around Carseland will be almost completed at the week end, with good average yields of varying quality. Shrinkage and frost have done some damage, but the total return will be very gratifying.

Dallened threshing is 50 per cent complete and the thresh is heavier than for this district.

Mr. Burton is threshing a beautiful crop of wheat, variously estimated at from 4 to 50 bushels. It will be interesting to see how the guesses come out.

Infantile Paralysis is unfortunately paying Carseland a visit in the case of a boy 15 years of age. He is being treated in Calgary and everything is being done to try to offset ill effects.
